Prime Ministers are the real entrepreneurial power behind the throne. Prime Ministers will pitch in themselves to get whatever needs to be done finished, in addition to helping form the vision and develop the strategy. Warning: Never tell them how to do things. Their attitude is, "There are many problems in the Kingdom . . . none in my area." Their focus is on productivity and the end result. Others can find them very direct, at times even blunt. Prime Ministers are, and see themselves as, the true source of power in the Kingdom. Frequently they will work in the background, so they can carry out their deals with minimum scrutiny and interference. Prime Ministers are excellent logicians and exceptional strategists. They are results oriented and scrupulously efficient.
